DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

---

Harrisburg, Pa., July 1, 1901.

The following Bulletin, No. 78, giving a list of the Fair Associations in Pennsylvania, with the dates of their fall exhibitions, is more complete than those of previous years. The Department has collected some data as to attendance, amount paid in premiums, size of trotting courses, etc., which will be of interest to the public. The statistics show that fifty-six fairs were held, and forty-nine report that over one million (1,143,071) of our people attended their fairs last year. It is evident that as a means of education these associations have exceptional opportunities. The thousands that attend them are there to see and to hear anything that may be of interest or use. Careful study, therefore, should be given to the question of the character of the exhibits and entertainments. The effort should be to have all of the departments of the fair interesting and instructive. To secure these ends, the first question that should be taken up, is, what do the agricultural people most need to know? After having discovered this, then plan to meet their wants. It will soon be discovered that they are not much interested in things that are inferior or of only ordinary character. They desire to learn, and in order to make this possible, the best should be presented and every effort be put forth to secure specimens, as near perfection as possible, in each class.

This Department has taken up the question of the unification and development of our local fairs, so as to aid in securing the highest efficiency of which they are capable. We, therefore, invite correspondence and suggestions which may aid us in this work. There is undoubtedly a wide field of usefulness before these organizations if they rise to their opportunities, and since the new agriculture is now in full operation everywhere, the fairs should be leaders in its further advancement.

If all the Fair Associations in the State were to take up a single topic this year and urge it upon the attention of its members, the effect upon the public would be far greater, than by pursuing the isolated method of each one conducting its exhibition independent of what the others do and having no topic common to all.

The question of better roads in the country, for instance, taken up by all of the associations and discussed and urged for two or three years, will bring about a great reform in this respect. Better schools in the country, is another topic which is of general and supreme importance. The attention of Fair Managers is respectfully called to the value of unity of action and are urged to exercise the greatest care in planning for the fall exhibitions this year, so as to make them of the most value to the agricultural public.

JOHN HAMILTON,
Secretary of Agriculture.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

---

Harrisburg, Pa., July 1, 1901.

Hon. John Hamilton, Secretary of Agriculture:

Dear Sir: I have the honor to present herewith, list of agricultural fairs and exhibitions to be held during the fall of 1901.

This report embraces numerous subjects relating to the agricultural interests of Pennsylvania, and I am indebted in no small degree to the secretaries of these various societies throughout the State for their promptness in responding to requests for information, as contained in this Bulletin.

The attendance at these exhibitions throughout the State is the strongest proof of their popularity and great value to the people.

The facts elicited in this Bulletin show that the attendance at 49 of these societies in 1900 was 1,143,071, or an average of 23,327 for each society so reporting. There were held during 1900, fifty-six agricultural exhibitions in the State. The total premiums paid by forty-nine of these societies in that year are recorded at $119,830.60, or an average for each of the 49 societies so reported, of $2,445.52. Thirty-nine societies offer a total in premiums for 1901, of $133,350.00, or an average of $3,419.23 for each of said societies so reported. This represents an increase in premiums offered this year, over and above those paid in 1900, of 39 per cent. A total of forty-seven of the societies herein recorded have a one-half mile race track, and seven a one-third mile track.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Very truly yours,

A. L. MARTIN,

Deputy Secretary of Agriculture.
